ALUMEABLE BEREEF, PICCAPILLY, LONDON, Nov. 19, 1862. \ \ \text{vc} at the Wellington Funeral—Julien's Promede Concerts at Drury Lane—The new Drama at the Princess-An Oration on Wellington by frs. C. Kean-The new Play at the Haymarket-The Drama at the City of London Theatre-Reay fellow close upon the heel of the military recomies and tawdry funereal car of yesterday's geant. Fifteen to sixteen hundred thousand peres thronged the line from the Horse Guards to St. Paul's Cathedral; the houses were the appearance of the Plaza de los Toros of Madrid during a bull fight; opera glasses and telescopes were in general requisition, whilst the unlucky wights who crowded the pavements contemplated, in very lenging, those happy parties within, who were in the early part of the day, quietly sipping their tes, coffee, or choeslate, and, at a later period, partaking of substan-tial luncheous, and discussing all kinds of wines, grogs and segars. The mob outside was far better chaved than the occupants of purchased seats and the shopkeepers' guests. The morning papers are everloaded with accounts of the funeral, which renders it unnecessary for me to indulge in a dissertation upon the subject.

The theatres have all done an enormous business this week, even far beyond the palmy days of the Great "1851" Exhibition. It is quite impossible to put your nose, either Reman, "retrausse" or "devot," into Drury Lane, for Julian's promenade "sevot," into Prury Lane, for Jullien's promenade concerts are now the grand attraction of the metropelis. The bills being headed "Last series, prior to Mr. Jullien's depirture for America." The programme nightly gives promise of compositions from popular and classical composers. The band is desically more perfect than on any previous occasion, and includes König. Bauman, Barrett, Levque, Collinet, Arban, Prospere, Cioffi, Pagol, Maycock, Aco., all of whom go to your shores with the great swacstro. In the way of novelty, the Brothers Mollinhamer, German violinists of great morit, and woulle, a Belgian clarionet player, indulge the audiences with solos, varied on each evening. Mad'lle Anna Lerr, too, nightly sings her selections from tha "Magic Flute," and her execution of the most difficult passages with perfect case is trilly automishing. I must not forget to mention the new polas, "Les Echov de Ment Blanc," composed in Jullien a happiest mode, and dedicated to our worthy and facctious Albert Smith, who has made anything but a blank of Mont Blanc, as I told you in my last.

Anne Blake, at the Princess, gains somewhat in thing but a blank of mont Diane, as I told you have have had no many hat.

Anne Blake, at the Princess, gains somewhat in public opinion, which is mainly, if not entirely, attributable to the excellent acting of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Kean and Mr. Wigan. Mrs. Charles Kean, hast evening, in order to mark the respect of herself, husband, and the company, for England's departed hero, recited, with all her wonted elements, the following:

A MONORY.

A MONODY.

A pause, a husb. Ye shapes awhile retire.
That draw your being from the poets fire;
Stand mute, ye heroes quickened by his will.
And bedied by the actor's art: All still;
Kneel with velled brows ye forms of sembled wee:
Not now for fabled grief a tear must flow;
Not now may fable d greatness thrill the heart;
Reality is here. Let dreams depart. Reality is here. Let dreams depart.
Yes, to each thought the hero who achieved
What sough has scarce recorded or conceived.
Is present now. He, on whose single mind
Heaven staked the lot of Europe and mankind,
Whom, like the law that guides the planet's track,
Our ecb of fame pure net through storm and rack.
Reso in the night of Nations. Hoaven staked the lot of Europe and mankind,

Whom, like the law that guides the planet's track,
Our orb of fame pursued through storm and rack.

Rese in the night of Nations, in whose sky
There finshed alone one metsor prosigy:
Ross with calm merch, enhoding above on shore,
And peaks that glory never lit before:
Rose to its senith—when that course was run
The world was day, and Britain was the sun.
Our Britain bore him!—Pride's best claim is read;
Our Britain holds him!—Scrow's worst is said.

What words may speak that sorrow? What regret
Measure the hero's greatness and our debt?
For not to him we give the mere acclaim
That greets the conqueror. His was higher fame.
The sword, that led our squadrons to the fight—
Ne'er drawn in vain—was ever drawn for right,
Whether, with patient toot on India's above
He tracked the winching "Tiger of Mysors;"
Or at Ansays—the ree piled rank on rank—
Breasting a rea of fire, on its bank
Fianted our banner; or, when Douro's coast
Lay black heath hoeftle thunder, locked and crossed,
Or built our eayry on the entreached height
Of Toires Vedras, thence to swoop in might,
He gave his country. And silver hair
Hisnored the brows of service—brews that caught
Through near an age no rhade of saifash thought.
The earliest beam teat his first pathway crost,
Beheld him where night found him—at his post,
Growd his bler. Kings mourn the mighty chief.
Ye hold the empires as his velor's fief!
Ye warriers mourn him, whose bright round complete
Knew overy turn of war except defeat.
Mourn bard ans pasiner: finely an ediest birth
Is best beileved when groatness trads the earth!
Our Shakspeare's self, who neopled every spiare,
Seeking a here, had but copled here:
Mourn him, ye tone of trade, for by that pense
He gave your harbors fill, your stores increase,
Mourn him, ye tone of trade for by that pense
He gave your harbors fill, your stores increase,
Mourn him, ye tone of the do his mourn him mot?
Upon usurping valor: or last, terew
His sword into the fact of Waterlee,
Presedon and order were his Bequest! He gives no more—we are his heirs: Oh, word that almost mocks the wealth it bears. When comes his like? I win column of the State, In 6pt Achilles—Nester in debate! Whose mind was virtue's poise - whom no success Might dazzle, no adversity depress, No bribs slime, no artifoc berry. No labor tire when duty showed the way,

No labor tire when duty showed the way.
No danger daunt and no tenown elate—
His fate soared high—his soul outcoared his fate.
A youth as freeb as his first laurels wore—
A hope undreamed a memory unforgod!
Insuraed, but living—potent, though unseen.
For three times record changes! "He has been,"
Is writ on myriad tombe—"He is "on thine.
Death but promotes these All that could decline of thy most homored being was its dust.
He never dies who holds his life a trust.
Hid from our sight, denied to every sense,
The hero patriot rules in influence.
A people free, united just and brave
Will kneel before the after of his grave,
And vow that, while the sea shall sweep our strand.
No foe shall tread no wrong pollute the land,
Where boart shall be unte the latest sus.
It sursed the fame, it holds the tomb of Wellington!

No foe shall tread no wrong pollute the land. Whose boast shall be unto the latest sum. It mured the fanc. It holds the tomb of Wellington:

The entire audience stood up, as on the occasion of the orchestra playing "God Save the Queen," and the monody was preceded by a "Marche Functive d'um Herez" of Besthoven Mrs. Kean's appearance was both beautiful and classical, and that well remembered and melocious voice of Ellen Tree gushed forth in all its pristine purity and freshness.

The Haymarket has produced a new piece, under the tile of "Massks under Faces," of which I will give you an account in my next. The Lyceum has also faunched forth a new two act farce for public favor, under the name of "Those Dear Blacks." It is a translation from the French. Mr. Charles Matthews has one of his father's parts, which, he develeped in his usual inimitable manner. It bids fair to hold a prominent place in the Lyceum bills for some time to come, particularly as it contains one or two judicious rape at "Uncle Tom's Cabin," the mawkish seen through by the better and more intelligent part of our community. Every dog has its day, and Mrs. Beecher Stowe has had hers.

In my last I promised to give you an account of the new and original five act play entitled "Civilization"—a circumstance praiseworthy in itself to the meanagement of the City of Lendon Theare, as proving the extension of the legitimate drama into a quarter it is most desirable that it should be found, as an agent in the proper education, not only of the people, but of the populace, and still more deserving of attention, from the fact that the actual drama produced on the East of London boards is a specimen of writing not simply creditable to the author, but meritorious in a high degree as an example of elaborate and such a definition; from another, which he is brought by an English vessel,) and friend and patron in the Abbe Gabriel, and in overaxious to learn from bim and those around him what "civilization" really means. Your Yankee, Major Dumbolton, is doing wonders with his Negro Serenaders at the Stread. Mr. Albert Smith opens his Mont Blass next week, and we are shoully promised, by Mr. Mitchell, the French plans, at the St. James' Theatre.

Town is to day all bastle and confusion, and the country folks are quitting in shouls. Hundreds of cab horses were killed yesterday, worn out by twenty-four hours' incessent tramping. As much as ten shillings has been offered to the Piccadilly waterman to sceure a cab to take an officer to the Birmingham railway station. From the appearance of the clouds. railway station. From the appearance of the clouds the reaction will doubtless prove a series of rainy and mudey weeks, accompanied by the usual heavy memotory and emptiness of this sesson of the year, so prevalent to this city.
